

Do you read fake or real news?

Made by: Zahraa, Paula, Leo, Silje and Adriana.

We made many people take a test that shows where adults, and kids are getting their news from.

Today more and more people are getting the news, from the social media. If you get your news from the social media, then there is a bigger risk that its fake news. There is so many fake news channels in the internet, so it can be very hard to find the real news. When we look at the numbers on the test, we can see that internet and social media are not the only common way to get news. You can find other common ways to find real news, like newspaper, or you can find the most famous new channel.

Kids and adults are getting their news from friends and family. That is not the safest spot to get the right news, because everyone has an opinion about everything, so you might see it from the wrong angle.

In the test we can see that so many people get their news from the internet, social media and friends and family. In the adult generation they mostly get the news from the tv, but They also get it from the internet as well.

Adults are more sceptical to the news, but the kids consume the news faster than the adults. The kids do not have the same wall to break down the fake news as the adults.

People become thoughtful when they read something in the news, but they dont think its the truth. An example could be a brand that you like to use, and it works for you, but the news says that the brand is bad, and that it is not good for you.

You are going to be more sceptical to what you read in the article. If you disagree the news, and you want to know if it is fake then you can just research about it. You can also just look on the back of the brand, and rad about the ingredients.
